

INSTRUCTIONS FOR AUTHORS

Beliefs and Values invites submission from scholars across the disciplinary spectrum as well as educators, policy makers, and leaders from a wide range of relevant areas (e.g., non-governmental organizations, religion, business, media). We are interested in articles that describe, interpret, or explain the origin and/or impact of beliefs and values on actions, policies, and practices around the globe, both historically and currently, while facilitating a greater understanding of self, others, and the world at large.

Among other possible areas of focus, contributions may come in the form of 1) empirical or theoretical articles; 2) literature reviews; 3) analyses and profiles (e.g., of programs, projects, people, organizations, systems, curricula); 4) proceedings (e.g., conferences, symposia); 5) reports from government or non-governmental organizations; 6) essays or commentaries; 7) reviews or summaries (e.g., of books, documentaries); and 8) other relevant materials that address one or more of the following major themes:

- Conflict Resolution
- Human Rights
- Sustainability
- Equal Treatment and Access
- Global Education
- Religious and Cultural Understanding

In matters of style and formatting, submitted manuscripts should conform to the Publication Manual of the American Psychological Association, 5th Edition, 2001, and must be typed double-spaced throughout, including the text, references, and tables. Articles should include an abstract of between 100 and 200 words. Authors should supply a list of four to six keywords, which will be used for indexing. Manuscripts submitted to Beliefs and Values are subject to blind peer review; therefore, the author's name, degree, and affiliation (department, institution, program) should appear on the cover sheet only, which should also include the article title; authors' names, degrees, and affiliations; and the complete mailing address, email address, and telephone number of the author designated to review proofs. Digital files for any figure should conform to tiff at 300ppi or eps. Please include written permission for previously published materials. Authors should submit a head shot with their manuscript. Head shots and any other photographs that accompany submissions should be JPG files that measure 3" × 5" and 300 pixels per inch. The digital submission of your manuscript is required.
